

Software protection information

TEKLYNX has chosen to protect its products with activation code software protection, a replacement to the traditional dongles.

The software protection is simply done by validating the license on your PC using the activation code that you have been allocated with.

With this software protection, you should not have any troubles with key connection or other equipment.

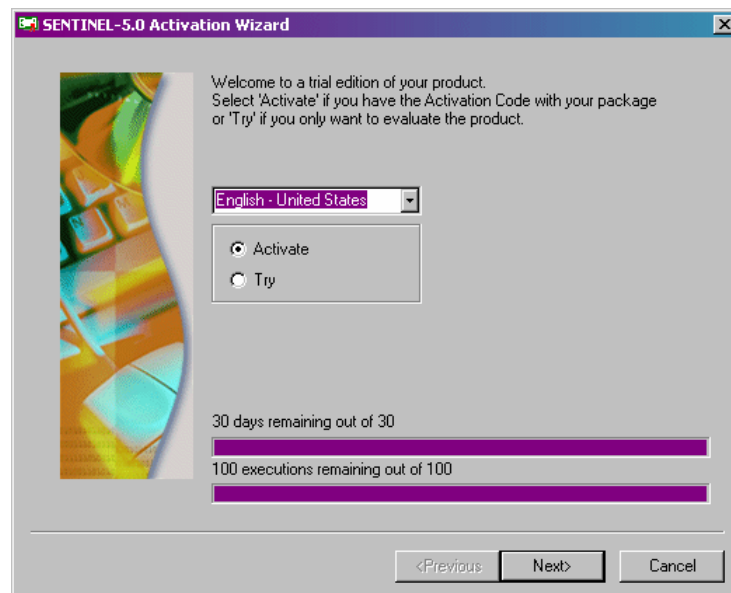

Note: The serial number and activation code is provided with the setup CD on a label. This number is your confidential license number and must be kept in a safe place.

Activation procedure

- The software must be installed before launching the activation procedure.
- When launching the software, a help assistant will display. It will suggest to either activate the product or to test the software in evaluation mode for 30 days or 100 processes.
